Places Visited

Wightwick Manor

The house was built by Theodore Mander, of the wealthy industrialist Mander family, between 1887 and 1893. Theodore and his wife Flora were inspired by Oscar Wilde's 'the House Beautiful' lecture when they came to decorate Wightwick's interiors, filling it with the designs of William Morris and his contemporaries. There will be private guided tour of the ground floor on arrival followed by free time for independent time in the rest of the house and an included lunch.

Chillington Hall

Chillington Hall has been the home of the Giffard family for over 800 years and is located on the Staffordshire / Shropshire border. The present Georgian house is the third to have been built upon the same site. In the 12th century there was a stone-built castle, a small corner of which remains in the cellars of the present house. The original house was replaced by Sir John Giffard in the mid-sixteenth century. The landscape park and lake to the south of the house were designed by Lancelot 'Capability' Brown during the 1760's for Thomas Giffard the elder. The lake, or The Pool as it is called, was formed by constructing a high dam which flooded three ponds to form one large stretch of water. Along the dam runs a drive which provides an alternative entrance from the Shropshire side.

Shugborough Hall

Home to the Anson family since 1624, it was once described as 'a perfect paradise'. You can explore sweeping parkland, ancient woodland and a landscape peppered with monuments. See seasonal blooms in the formal gardens or produce in the walled garden. In the Georgian mansion, unearth unusual treasures and experience life 'below stairs' in the servant's quarters, then enter a world of glamour and royalty in the apartments of Patrick Lichfield, 5th Earl and fashion photographer.

Heath House

This Gothic revival mansion is located near the village of Tean in Staffordshire and is the home of the Philips family. The current house was first constructed in 1836 for John Burton Philips (previously a High Sheriff of Staffordshire) and his wife, Joanna. However, the Philips family first bought the estate in the 1680s, and the current house replaced an older construction. Notable guests who have visited The Heath House over the years include Florence Nightingale who came to the house after the Crimean War. The Heath House was requisitioned for the Red Cross during World War II and was used as an auxiliary hospital for military personnel. After the war, the property was returned to the Philips family.

Biddulph Grange Gardens

This amazing Victorian garden was created by James Bateman for his collection of plants from around the world. A visit takes you on a global journey from Italy to the pyramids of Egypt, a Victorian vision of China and a re-creation of a Himalayan glen. The garden features collections of rhododendrons, summer bedding displays, a stunning Dahlia Walk and the oldest surviving golden larch in Britain, brought from China in the 1850s.

Spode Museum

The Spode Museum Trust Heritage Centre opened in 2012 in one of the period buildings on the Spode site in Stoke. It doubled in size in 2016 and expanded further in 2017 with improved Visitor Facilities, Exhibition and Gallery spaces and a Retail Shop. The Heritage Centre tells the story of Spode and its importance to Stoke over the 230 years of its operation, with displays of its history, working conditions and people from the 1770s up to the time it closed in 2008, when Spode was still producing world class hand-painted ceramic wares. Activities at the Centre include demonstrations by former Spode employees of printing on antique machinery from original copperplates and hand painting onto bone china. The Blue Room contains hundreds of blue transfer printed pieces made at Spode between c.1790-1847 and is almost certainly the largest and most important collection of Blue and White printed ceramics on public display in the world. The process for underglaze printing in blue on earthenware was perfected by Josiah Spode around 1780, revolutionising ceramic decoration, and although widely copied, Spode's productions are considered the finest of all.

Whitmore Hall

Whitmore Hall has been in the same family for over 900 years and their history can be traced all the way back to the 11th Century Norman Conquest. The house is a fine example of the late 17th and early 18th centuries. One of the outstanding features of Whitmore is the extremely rare example of a late Elizabethan stable block, the ground floor is part cobbled and has nine oak-carved stalls. A lime avenue leads from the church to the house, and surrounding parkland and lake suggest 'Capability' Brown's hand.
