Places Visited

Kirby Hall

Kirby Hall is one of England's greatest Elizabethan and 17th-century houses, once owned by Sir Christopher Hatton, Lord Chancellor to Queen Elizabeth I.

Although this vast mansion is partly roofless, the walls show the exceptionally rich decoration that proclaims that its successive owners were always at the forefront of new ideas about architecture and design.

Harrowden Hall

The present Harrowden Hall was built in 1719 by Thomas Watson Wentworth, a son of Lord Rockingham, but there has been a house on this site since the 15th century. For much of the time it has been the home of the Vaux family who were created barons by Henry VIII in 1523. In 1975 it was bought by Wellingborough Golf Club to be its new Clubhouse after it had been saved from almost certain demolition by Mr. A.J. Macdonald Buchanan.

The Vaux family owned the Hall until 1695 when they sold it to Thomas Watson Wentworth, a son of Lord Rockingham of Rockingham Castle. Two centuries later, the 7th Lord Vaux was able to buy back the Hall. He left the estate virtually untouched apart from a chapel he had built in the grounds. Lord Vaux died in 1935 and his daughter became Baroness Vaux of Harrowden. She was married to William Gordon Gilbey, the owner of a wine and spirits group.

On her death in 1958 the ownership passed to her eldest son, Father Gabriel Gilbey, a Benedictine monk. In 1962 he took his seat in the House of Lords as the 9th Lord Vaux, the first Benedictine monk to do so since 1559.

Sir Nicholas Vaux, a man "of a generous, liberal and festive disposition, and equally fitted for the camp or the court", entertained King Henry VIII at Harrowden Hall.

During the Civil War, Charles I came frequently to Harrowden to play bowls with the then Lord Vaux. "A quaint old summer house" (gazebo) close to the bowling green is where he and his courtiers used to refresh themselves after their games." The restored summer house now stands proudly in the middle of the first fairway.

In 1876, a girls' school was established here. Probably the most celebrated of the pupils was Princess Kaiulani of Hawaii, who was being groomed for a royal future but died tragically at the age of twenty-three.

The Manor House, Ashby St Ledgers – outside view only

The Manor House, Ashby St Ledgers, is one of the most intriguing and historic houses in England. From 1375 to 1611 it was the home of the Catesby family. In 1605 Robert Catesby and his fellow conspirators, including Guy Fawkes, gathered regularly in the Manor's gatehouse. There they conspired to assassinate King James I and his courtiers by blowing up the Houses of Parliament in one of England's most notorious acts of treason, the Gunpowder Plot. The Manor House comprises diverse architectural periods and styles, masterfully integrated in the early 20th century by renowned architect Sir Edwin Lutyens under the patronage of industrialist Ivor Guest, 1st Viscount Wimborne.

Boughton House

One of Britain's grandest and best-preserved stately homes. As well as the splendours of the House, you can also enjoy the 18th century landscaped gardens, woodlands and a grand country park. At Boughton you can also see one of Britain's most outstanding collections of fine art, furniture, tapestries, porcelain and carpets. Visitors can view a magnificent range of paintings by great artists, including The Adoration of the Shepherds by El Greco, Gainsborough's portrait of Mary Montagu, grisailles and portraits by Van Dyck, and Breaking Cover by John Wootton.

Boughton also has some of the best-preserved baroque State Rooms in the British Isles. Here you can walk through grand apartments of contrasting character decorated in extravagant yet elegant taste with the finest artworks of the House's golden era.

Once you've had your tour of the House, you can step out into the surrounding country park. Its tranquil delights have been carefully restored over the last decade, and now there are wide sculptured lawns to survey, serene lakes, waterways, woods and avenues of trees to be strolled down.

Rushton Triangular Lodge

Built by a wealthy heir called Thomas Tresham, a devout Catholic politician for whom three was most definitely the magic number, this was the most eccentric building to look at – a visual thrill that demands you walk around it again and again. As the name suggests, it's triangular-shaped and there's so much detail that it almost needs an aerial view to take it all in.

Completed in 1596, it's a celebration of the Holy Trinity; God as the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit. Three sides, three storeys, three gables, and windows in rows of three. The building is even 33 feet wide – the age at which Christ was said to have died on the cross. There are three Latin texts (each 33 letters long) running around the building.

Tresham was a devout Catholic living under Queen Elizabeth I's Protestant reign and his beliefs cost him liberty and money. He designed the lodge while he was in prison for his dogmas and he lost a large part of his fortune paying off fines.

Despite its rebellious ciphers, thankfully the Triangular Lodge survived persecution to feed our imagination and curiosity today. <http://www.english-heritage.org.uk/visit/places/rushton-triangular-lodge/>

Rushton Hall

Rushton Hall was the ancestral home of the Tresham family from 1438, when William Tresham bought the estate. In the 20th century the house became a private school and it has now been converted to a luxury hotel. The estate is about 227 acres of which 30 acres are formal gardens. The River Ise flows from west to east south of the Hall.
